UNITE 2023
UNCF SUMMIT FOR BLACK HIGHER EDUCATION

Largest, most influential gathering advancing Black colleges and universities.
Designed to reach across traditional lines of responsibility and present 360-degree views of key issues in higher education, our five Guiding Pillars support advancing the missions of Black colleges and universities and strengthening Black higher education as a whole.
1: Institutional Excellence

Black colleges and universities have been key levers in the development and uplift of the Black community. The United Negro College Fund was established in 1944 as a membership organization of HBCUs, committed to helping each achieve their critical missions.

At this year’s summit, we are redoubling our efforts to support all Black colleges and universities as they pursue transformation and sustainability.

UNITE sessions on Institutional Excellence are designed for institutional leaders, partners and champions committed to adapting new and promising strategies leading to effective partnerships, streamlined processes and enhanced skills and capabilities.

By embracing Institutional Excellence, we ensure Black colleges and universities are equipped to meet the demands of today’s learners, preparing them for a future of limitless opportunities.
The HBCU Transformation Project is making history

Change is the only constant in society. Economics, politics, culture, technology—they all are in continual motion. To continue to lead and build a sustainable future, Black colleges and universities must also transform.

The HBCU Transformation Project—an unprecedented collaboration among UNCF, Thurgood Marshall College Fund, Partnership for Education Advancement and Blue Meridian Partners, seeks to ensure Black colleges and universities are equipped to meet the demands of today’s learners, and prepare them for tomorrow’s opportunities.

That’s why we are redoubling our efforts to support all Black colleges and universities as they pursue ongoing transformation.

We showcase opportunities to teach, innovate, share thought leadership and revisit time-proven approaches so all students can maximize their higher education experience.

Research and Innovation Overview

The future, as they say, is now. Right now.

Seismic changes in remote learning, big data, and institutional research, assessment and evaluation are all on the horizon and leaders who seize the moment and new ideas will shape the future of Black higher education.

When HBCUs reflect intentionally on their existing practices, implement innovations with the latest technology, and track progress using data-driven approaches, they create the conditions for all of their stakeholders to thrive.

UNITE sessions on Research and Innovation are for those with one eye on the changes to come, and the other on what we must do today to prepare for their timely arrival.
HBCUv is forging a new digital future for Black college students nationwide

With the virtual platform HBCUv, HBCUs are on the threshold of leading all of higher education into the next digital age.

Our goal is to offer enhanced online experiences and opportunities for students, faculty, community members and institutions, highlighting opportunities to teach in novel ways, innovate together, share thought-leadership and pursue new communities eager to experience an HBCU education.

5: Systems Change

Economic Mobility Overview

HBCUs have always had an outsized impact on social and economic mobility for the Black community.

From the beginning, HBCUs have collaborated with business and industry to strengthen institutional operations while prioritizing practices that helped their students develop fulfilling, life-affirming and community-sustaining careers.

Through collaboration between educators, industry leaders, and strategic partners, we strive to enhance career pathways that support skill development, student engagement and transition to the world of work.

UNITE sessions on Economic Mobility are for champions committed to furthering economic independence for Black college students and the Black community.
Economic Mobility Highlight: Career Pathways Summit Track

Building stronger bridges from campus to career for HBCU grads.

In partnership with Lilly Endowment, INC., UNCF launched the award-winning Career Pathways Initiative in 2016 to help strengthen career placement outcomes in HBCUs and PBIs by improving their institutional systems, enhancing the co-curricular experience of their students, and aligning curricula to provide the skills, experiences and knowledge employers are seeking.

Building on that foundation, we now seek to hone practices that lead to economic mobility for our students and communities.
Economic Mobility Summit Tracks

Workforce Skills. Aligning programs and curricula to the skills needed in the 21st century workforce, including the development of entrepreneurship competencies.

Career Pathways. Securing the supports and onramps that enable successful transition from college to career.

Industry Collaboration. Cultivating alliances between institutions and industry leaders to create the conditions for a just, equitable, diverse and inclusive workforce.

STEM Initiatives. Advancing STEM learning, research and curriculum development, along with helping HBCUs commercialize the technologies and intellectual property developed by their faculty and students.
Systems Change Overview

No matter the scale and accomplishments of our individual institutions, we’re all just fish in a large pond. We all operate in the roiling waters of our larger society, where systems beyond an institution’s control can impact the well-being and effectiveness of its students, faculty, and communities.

We can only compel the Systems Change needed for our institutions by making waves as a group.

UNITE sessions on Systems Change are for those seeking to leverage expertise and networks - both inside and outside of higher education - to positively influence the success of our students and institutions.

By harnessing our efforts, we ensure Black colleges and universities are positioned to influence systems that can accelerate their progress.
Black colleges and universities activate on climate and environmental justice

Black higher education didn’t cause the climate crisis, nor are we prime drivers of it. But that doesn’t mean we aren’t impacted by it, nor any less positioned to lead solutions for it.

Thanks to unprecedented support from the Waverley Street Foundation, we’re shaping a new initiative to see how HBCUs can lead in a variety of climate action measures, including through climate-centered research, curriculum design, facilities planning, procurement, community engagement, advocacy, endowment strategy, and student activation.

Learners

More than half (52%) of students are the first in their family to attend college. For most, tuition and housing costs are not financially sustainable without assistance.

70% of HBCU students are from households with annual income of less than $35,000 and 90%+ quality for federal or state-based financial aid.

Compared with Predominantly White Institutions, HBCUs enroll 2.1 times more Pell-eligible (low-income) students.

Colleges

HBCUs persist in service to their student populations in spite of unequal funding and resource allocation.

Compared to peer PWIs:

- Private HBCUs receive only 60% in federal funding.
- HBCU tuition rates are 30% less. HBCU endowments are just a third.
- HBCUs experienced only a 19% increase in gifts, grants and contracts between 2010-2018 while peer PWIs with more than a $1 billion endowment benefited from a 78% boon.

Meaningful response to documented needs and injustices.

Today Black colleges and universities continue to tackle challenges tied to resource scarcity and structural inequities.

Return-On-Investment:
HBCUs create $14.8 billion in total economic impact, generating 134,090 jobs for local and regional economies.
